7 Models in 1941 Range No. 21 Self-Propelled

MASSEY-HARRIS leadership in the pioneering and development of combines in the Canadian market extends back many years.

With the courage of their convictions in the future of combines, Massey-Harris engineers were tireless in their efforts to solve many of the early problems of combine design.

They succeeded to the extent that many features now commonly accepted as best for combine use were the direct result of Massey-Harris effort and research. Massey-Harris combines today offer most in efficiency of field performance, economy of operation and upkeep.

That is why they are the most popular line on the market. Farmers know that in the Massey-Harris line they can expect best value for their money. Evidence of the popular demand for Massey-Harris is shown in the fact that for three successive seasons, 1938, 1939 and 1940, the entire factory output of Massey-Harris combines was completely sold out even in the face of increased production. The line this year is bigger, better, more complete than ever.

The Trumpets Of Victory

Nine Governments which have led to Hitler every foot of their territory joined Britain and her dominions in declaring that they will fight the war and the Roman Catholic Church described as has wretched lackey "until victory is won, that there is no settled peace and prosperity as long as few peoples are violently coerced, and that they will work together to achieve a "world in which relieved of the menace of aggression all may enjoy economic and social security."

Egg Market Strong

Britain May Require A Large Supply Of Eggs

Indications are that Great Britain will require an increasingly large supply of eggs from Canada during the third year of the war. The Dominion Department of Agriculture believes it is now too late to prepare for this demand through the purchase of baby chicks, but a great deal can be done by a careful selection and carrying over of all available laying stock. There is a noticeable tendency at the present time on the part of poultry producers to reduce laying flocks, the marketing of fowl being quite heavy during the winter months in Canada.

Is It Enough?

In the daily press, from the platform, over the air, through government pamphlets, Canadians are being regaled daily with serried rows of statistics detailing in various forms and in differing language with the accomplishments of the Canadian war effort covering now nearly two years of the greatest fight in the history of the world.

Each month now there comes to hand a bulletin issued by the Director of Public Information at Ottawa, entitled "Canada at War," a summary of Canada's part in the war since September 10, 1939. "It is Intended" states a preliminary note, "to serve as a source of material for speakers and those who ask for up-to-date information about Canada's participation in the war. It will be revised monthly and will contain the most recent

Dealing with all aspects of the Canadian war effort, including contributions which have been made to date in the supply of men, materials and money, the editor's guide put forth by Canadians in the theatre of war as well as on the home front, will result in a more satisfactory educational departments and boards, the booklet affords a valuable, yet concise compendium of information on the Canadian war achievement to date.

Although apparently designed principally as a handbook for speakers and possibly writers, it is a booklet deserving of study by the general public. Since it is factual, the information it contains can safely be regarded as reliable and the reader is left with no doubt as to the facts for arriving at conclusions without fear of bias or prejudice or false promises.

Unhappy Satisfaction

There can be no galvanizing the statement that Canada entered the war relatively unprepared with a comparatively weak military establishment and an industrial plant ungeared to war requirements. Since that time great changes have taken place and much has been accomplished in the way of strengthening the country's military and industrial equipment. Imposed upon the country as a partner with others in the Allied effort against world domination by Hitler and his hordes.

It may bring a sense of comfort and satisfaction to read, for instance, that: "Since the outbreak of the war Canada has diverted an ever-increasing portion of her resources to the production of war materials."

The 1941-42 budget provides between 35 and 40 per cent. of the national income for war. More than a quarter million Canadians are serving in the active armed forces abroad and at home. . . . Moreover, Canada's industrial capacity has very largely been turned over to war production.

These are undoubted facts and Canadians are justified in taking some pride in what has been achieved to date, but that pride and satisfaction must be tempered by the knowledge and unquestioned belief that much more must be done, that the tempo of effort must be raised to a higher degree, before it will be possible to say that nothing has been left undone that can be done and that every last sacrifice that can be made by every in-

"Canada's war plans for the balance of this year have been made on the basis of consultations held early this year with the heads of Britain's Navy, Army and Air Force, with Prime Minister Churchill and with other high officials in the British government. The purpose of the general summary in the booklet referred to, and added: "Canadian ministers told these officials that Canada's object is a full-out contribution with everything Canada has and as fast as she can give it."

Complete Fulfilment

These words denote that a solemn promise has been made on behalf of the Canadian people and they naturally inspire the question whether or not we have yet reached the stage in our war effort when we can say that this promise has reached fulfilment. That is a personal question and one which every Canadian must ask himself or herself: "Is there something more that I could do that I have not yet done?" Is my contribution to the war effort enough? There yet some sacrifice that I could make that I have not yet made? Upon the answer to these questions by every individual depends the destiny of the Dominion.

Canadian Soldiers In Britain Have Opportunity For Taking Many Side Trips

From the Strand in London, through the English Channel in Edinburgh, from the palisaded parks of Turin to the Prime Minister's at the peaks of the French highlands, Canadian soldiers have been in a hundred cities and towns, visiting famous places in England and Europe.

By joining the army for service overseas, they have been able to "door for travel in the United Kingdom and thousands take advantage of the chance to wander through the island.

Even Prime Minister Churchill drew attention to this in a recent broadcast to Canada when he said Canadian troops are becoming a familiar sight in the towns and villages of England." He could have added Scotland as well.

Seven days' leave is granted every three months, and every six months soldiers are entitled to travelling warrants, giving them great opportunities to visit three main places in England or Scotland. London is still the first stop-off, sometimes the only stop-off for leave-bound troops, although there are no certain restrictions on going to the capital to protest men against air raids.

There are always a few Canadians on Trailways Service, by Canadian Pacific Railway, and they are going at the spectacle of London's wartime life, such as, bustling streets, crowded theatres, and civil defence workers.

At night, soldiers are in the Haymarket, Piccadilly Circus and Leicester Square, they flock to the latest London cinema, and they see the most congenial pubs and clubs in London. And there are many places where you can always find a cup of Canada.

They can spend an evening from between 5 to 10 on a week's leave, and they consider it very reasonable when they look upon a place as they would sit in Canada.

Several organizations in London are doing their best to help the band's famous places during their training and leave periods. They are the Royal Windsor and Blenheim to see the castle and visit the village.
